FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1887.

The President has decreed and the House has enacted that the dependent veterans who are to-day objects of charity through no fault of their own must remain in the poor house, while able bodied Confederates, whether in need of Government aid or not, may draw on the treasury at the rate of eight dollars a month, provided that they served six days in the Mexican war. When the attempt was made in the House yesterday to pass the bill over the veto of the President it failed for lack of the necessary two-thirds vote, the record standing 175 yeas to 135 nays. It is useless for the Administration or anyone, which now sneer at the men they were glad to have fight for them in a time of danger, as "paupers" and "bummers," to print anonymous letters, or cite the opinion of an occasional veteran as showing that the soldiers were not in favor of this bill. They were in favor of it as righting a great wrong and their indignant protest at this stultifying action of the House will be heard from one end of the country to the other.

The Republican Candidacy.
[Interview with Mr. Clarkson, of Des Moines, Ia.]
I have no reason to think that Mr. Blaine has lost strength in any quarter, and I believe that he has gained in strength in New York and Indiana. He has gained in New York, because he has shown since 1884 that he would take no part in factional local contests for his friends in the party, or against those who fought him in 1884. He has taken a position of peace in the party which I think has drawn to him many of the Republicans who opposed him. The disorganizing business interests of New York City and state as they have reflected over it, and as they have seen the development of national and international questions since 1884, have a large degree abandoned the fear that some of them had in regard to him, and do not now consider him an apostle of Jingoism as they did then.

The Senate has passed the bill increasing the salaries of the Judges of the Supreme Court by a vote of seventeen to seven, the measure went back to the House and passed that body yesterday by a vote of seventy-two to sixty-six. As but practically one sentiment has been expressed regarding the measure, namely, that it ought to pass, the action of the House in receding from its former vote will be generally approved.

The Boston Herald says the President's popularity seems to be gaining among the politicians of the Democratic party. The wish is father to the thought in this case. With nearly every leading Democratic organ of any significance firing broadsides at the humbug reform Administration, like that which we quote from the New York Herald this morning, the "independent," wishy-washy organs of the Herald stripe will make mighty little headway in manufacturing Cleveland sentiment in the Democratic party.

The returns from the Canadian election show that the Macdonald party secured a victory but by a considerably reduced majority. The re-election of Minister Foster shows that the policy of the Dominion Government will remain unchanged as regards the fisheries question, unless it receives a check by the enforcement of a regulatory legislation on the part of the Dominion Government, which shows the importance of Congressional action to meet the requirements of the case. The House has substituted the Belmont bill for the Senate bill, which will send the matter to a conference committee, and some satisfactory measure should be agreed upon before adjournment.

We are sorry for Bangor, but do not think her investment in the B. & P. should be allowed to stand in the way of the interests of other sections of the State and direct means of communication for freight and passenger traffic.—Belmont Journal.

The people of Bangor are antagonizing the interests of no other section of the State. They stand ready today as they have from the first to contribute to the success of the project in direct accordance with the original plan agreed upon by both companies. If our contemporary will take the trouble to review the history of this matter it will see that Bangor has acted in good faith throughout, and that there is no reason why her interests should be sacrificed today.

The people of Indiana should be waded with their Court, disinterestedly and let "Good-Better" run the Shaw G. vernment. This interesting individual not only has claim to an office for which he did not receive a vote, but after his case has been decided against him by the Court, which refused to grant an injunction restraining the legally elected Lieutenant Governor from occupying his seat, he refuses to respect the decision and still persists in declaring himself to be the president of the State. The House has now done what it ought to have done from the first, namely, to recognize the Senate as legally organized as long as this usurper holds his seat. If the Senate could afford to assume the responsibility of stopping the wheels of legislation by these revolutionary tactics the House can afford to let them do it.

A few weeks ago the figure editor of the New York Post was quoting the 163,000 Democratic majority given in Texas last November as a proof that the fortunes of the Republican party were on the wane. The investigation going on before the Senate into the methods used by the Democrats to illustrate the straits to which the Democracy was put in order to furnish the Post with a basis for its deductions. The party that resorts to murder, lynchings and false-bill robbery ought to be able to roll up a "beauty" majority every time and yet wonder is that they did not make it 300,000 instead of a puny 163,000? And when it comes to choosing between the brutal Texas lynchings and the sniveling Northern editor who, to push out his insidious arguments, quotes a majority gained by violence as a legitimate result the intelligent people of this country will pronounce the Texas by far the more desirable of the two.

Among the Democratic brethren the Commercial alone seems to regard the appointment of a local Board of Examiners in the nature of a joke and its amendment is decidedly forced. The fact is nothing of late has occurred to stir the souls of the faithful like the announcement of this commission. The object of the authorities at Washington is, of course, unknown here, but it is only fair to assume that they have selected this most excellent Board of Examiners if in their intention to give it something to do. The official notice upon their appointment informs the Examiners that the board is created under section 3 of the civil service law, entitled an act "to regulate and improve the civil service of the United States." That being the case the inference is that hereafter all appointments to positions in the Government building must be subject to civil service rules. These rules provide that clerks in the postal service must be examined in spelling, arithmetic, the fundamental rules of fractions, percentages, interest, discount, the elements of book-keeping and accounts, the elements of the English language, letter writing, the proper construction of sentences, and the elements of geography, history and government of the United States. In pure kindness to the Democratic brethren we call their attention to a few of these essential points in order that they be prepared for the ordeal through which, from present indications, it would seem they must pass before they can read their titles clear to a place on the pay rolls of Uncle Sam. However this matter may be settled, the fact remains that a body of men, the Democracy's "A. C. of the year," are to be examined.

between the people and the machinery of their government." In a majority of the States, to put it moderately, the patronage has been turned out to a class thus characterized by the President—Senators, Representatives and other officeholders. The President proclaims that "the influence of Federal officeholders should not be felt in the manipulation of political primary meetings and nominating conventions." Such influence was openly and defiantly exercised in a multitude of cases. Yet but one official was removed, and he a Republican, who made a moderate speech in the exercise of his undoubted right. All through the country men have been removed without cause and appointed without right to offices for personal and political reasons. Thomas, Higgins, Pillsbury, Troup, Beattie, Sorbia, Combs and scores of other prominent cases will furnish illustrations.

It is as unjust as it is absurd to represent the President as either the victor or the conqueror of the "anti-reform" element in his party. What he has done in other direction has done with his eyes open, and has striven to it. And why fancy it will trouble our organic contemporary to reconcile the President's acts with his words, or to make the record harmonize with his ideal of a reformer.

Attorney at Law, Bangor, Me.

The President volunteered a declaration, after his election, that non-political officers "should not be removed during the term for which they were appointed, so as to put in partisans grounds for a purpose of putting in their places those who are in political accord with the appointing power." Thousands of such removals and appointments have been made for these reasons. The President, in making these removals, is in fact, "holding" a dependence upon a "party" or "set" of persons, and is in fact, "holding" a dependence upon a "party" or "set" of persons.
